Nfl playoff tv schedule 2020 printable

Only eight more NFL teams are playing, and come Monday that the number will be down to four. That's how we've been doing all season, simorbing the week games, but for the play-offs we've done a few different things. Rather than simulate a whole week at once, we recreated each game individually to give us a better look at how these games will play out. We also tried to establish weather conditions based on current forecasts and ensured that the lists reflected them in real life. Oh, and I pulled the Xbox 360. Throughout the season we used both the Xbox 360 and PlayStation 4, and of the two 360 had a better record. From this case, we've gone back to the more successful version of Madden 25 for the playoffs. It was a mistake. Last week the game went 0-4 using the Xbox 360, so I pulled it and went back to PS4 for the second round of playoffs. In this week's play-offs, Madden picks three of the four away teams. The only home team predicted to survive is New England. But if last week is a clue, that's good news for the Colts. Saturday, January 11 New Orleans Saints (12-5) @ Seattle Seahawks (13-3) In the first game of the weekend, the Saints are predicted to roll in Seattle and easily win thanks to the 305 meters that passes from Drew Brees - 131 of them will go to Lance Moore alone. And hey, the Saints are hot right now following their victory over the Eagles last week, which broke a five-playoff losing streak on the road. Maybe this is their year. Of course, the teams played once more on December 2. Seattle, who had two weeks to rest, won the game 34-7. The 27 Saints, the Seahawks 13 Indianapolis Colts (12-5) @ New England Patriots (12-4) Colts and Patriots renew their playoff rivalry, but this time it's without Peyton Manning. Instead, the Colts are led by young quarterback Andrew Luck, who last week helped the engineer the biggest comeback in NFL playoff history. According to Madden, Luck will have a bad day - just 139 meters passing. Brady won't have an exit record, but his 220 yards and 2 TDs should be enough. Patriots 28, Colts 6 Sunday, January 12 san francisco 49ers (13-4) @ Carolina Panthers (12-4) Two of the best young quarterbacks in the league are going to take the field in Carolina, but according to Madden one team will support their QB more than the other. In the simulation, the 49 men recorded 322 meters of total offensive, while the Panthers gathered 240. Of the 240 feet, Cam Newton was responsible for 210 of them, including all except 20 carolina's rushing yards. Kaepernick, on the other hand, threw for 214 yards and was backed by Frank Gore's 78 yards. 49ers 28, Panthers 10 San Diego Chargers (10-7) @ Denver Broncos (13-3) This marks the third time Chargers and the Broncos have played this season, each winning team on the way. The last time the two played was almost exactly a month ago, on January 12, when Chargers went to Denver and won 27-20. In In Madden predictions, the fault lies not with Peyton Manning, who is expected to throw for 344 yards and 3 TDs. Philip Rivers is not expected to put as many yards, just 281, but in the simulated game he managed to match Manning 3 TDs. Gardening Hmmm .... wie die duften! And then there were four. Last week, Madden picked only two games incorrectly! Of course, that was out of four, but don't get us mixed up with semantics. This week marks the Conference Championships, and come Monday we will know which two teams are playing in Super Bowl XLVIII. Will the Broncos ride home-field advantage to the Big Game over the Patriots? Will 49ers make their second look straight? Madden has some thoughts about that. As in last week's divisional games, we simulated every match as best we could. We made sure the list was as up-to-date as possible, set the weather based on current forecasts, and watched high-budget ads throughout the simulations just to make it feel more legal. In the end, Madden predicted a game very close that - if correct - would go down as one of the best playoff games in a long time, and an explosion. We're going to find out this Sunday if Madden has a future in this whole prediction game thing or not. New England Patriots @ Denver Broncos In the first game of the day, Tom Brady and Peyton Manning face off once again. If you follow sports, then you've probably heard someone bring that Brady and Manning have played 14 times during their careers, and Brady and the Patriots have won 10 of them. There's an asterisk to that, though. Brady won his first six games, from 2001 to 2004, during a period when the Patriots won two Super Bowls. Since then, the two have split the other eight games, four to four. Of course, the last meeting the two was on November 24, and the Patriots won this game 34-31. This time, though, the teams are playing in Denver. Denver. Predict that this game will be a shootout, and come down to at the last minute. Madden simulated the Broncos with multiple total offensives, 368 to 307, but the crossing yards were closer. Manning threw Brady with 311 ards and 3 TDs; Brady reached 270 yards and 3 TDs. Manning also threw 2 interceptions at the unique Brady Int, though. Both quarterbacks moved the ball effectively, with each team finishing with three receivers recording more than 70 metres. Contrary to what we've seen from the real Pats in the last few games, the focus in the madden version has been on the pass. Against the Colts, the LeGarrettE Blount Patriots ran 166 yards and 4 TDS, but according to Madden, Blount will tally a weak 56 yards and 1 TD. Finally, though, it will be reduced to an 82-meter drive with less than 2 minutes to go, ending with Brady connecting with Julian Edelman with 39 seconds left, sending the Patriots to the Sixth Super Bowl of 2004 Score: Patriots 31, Broncos 30 San Francisco 49ers @ Seattle Seahawks While the first game of the day came down to the last minute of the game, Madden is predicting the game later in Seattle will be something of an explosion. Divisional rivals NFC West will meet for the third time this season, with each team recording one win over the other at home. The last time the two met was a month ago, on December 8, in San Francisco, where the 49-year-olds won 19-17. In the previous session on September 15 in Seattle, though, the Seahawks crushed 49ers 29-3. Of course, this is the Conference Championship. Anything can happen. In the battle between the two much-hyped sophomore quarterbacks, 49rs QB Colin Kaepernick threw in for 261 yards and 2 TDs with 18 yards in a hurry, compared to the QB Russell Wilson Seahawks of 177 yards and 1 TD. Kaepernick also threw an expensive pick-six interception in the third, and also gave up a fumble. The RB Seahawks Marshawn Lynch again had a masterful game, rushing 74 yards and 1 TD, while 49ers RB Frank Gore put up 52 yards and a TD. According to Madden, Seattle will control the game from the start, scoring 14 unanswered points and finishing the first quarter 14-3. The Seahawks didn't watch throughout the game. The 49-year-old managed to get him to four points at half-time, with the teams hitting the dressing room 14-10, but the third quarter was also Seattle. By the start of the fourth, the score was 31-10. The 49ers managed two fourth-quarter touchdowns, but the result was never really in doubt, and the Seahawks advanced to their second Super Bowl in franchise history. Score: Seahawks 31, 49ers 24 Editors' Recommendations NFL season is back in full swing and despite the multitude of apps available in the App Store to keep up with what's going on, one of the easiest ways to The team program's record is to add it to your iPhone or iPad calendar.
